PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

FOR THE GAZETTE.

EXTRACTS FROM THE JOURNAL OF A VOYAGE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

Chapter V.

Aug. 17. The wind was fair and the weather more settled than any we had yet had. Towards evening the wind fell, the tired elements seemed for a moment to repose, and the billows, no longer agitated, sunk to rest. The night was serene and beautiful, and to complete the scene, a brilliant moon shed her rays over the deep.—For the want of more amusing company, I ascended to the deck about midnight, to

"Associate with serious night
And contemplation her sedate compeer;"

and was delighted to find my sober friend in so lively a mood. She was certainly dressed to see company, and was attired in her most brilliant habit. I found capt. K. already there, paying his respects, and as it presently occurred to us, that some of our "long lost" friends were bowing to the same idol in a distant part of the saloon, we naturally fell into a conversation respecting them—It was the first interval of peace we had enjoyed, and forcibly recalled the quiet homes and affectionate friends we had left.

"I thought of the days when to pleasure alone,
My heart ever granted a wish or a sigh;"

and contrasting the ease and safety of social life, with the turbulent and rugged path, that we must travel in pursuit of glory, I could almost fancy that I felt a momentary regret for the former, and that the latter would never compensate for the pains she had cost. The ardour of pursuit, and the difficulty of attainment, generally correspond with the value of the object, which is sought. He, therefore, who aspires at an honest and a lasting fame, seeks the highest object of human ambition, and must pursue it with a steady eye and an unwearied foot. If he attains his object he may be happy.—But the event of all human schemes, shews their fallacy. A plan formed by the enterprising and fruitful genius of youth, and matured by the vigour and perseverance of manhood, often fails to yield the anticipated enjoyment. The passions and the desires, that prompted the undertaking have cooled and faded away before its accomplishment, and the repast designed by the glowing fancy of youth affords but little pleasure to the decrepid taste of old age.

We were roused from our sentimental recreation by a swell which suddenly struck the vessel, and dashing over, at once overwhelmed us and drowned our reflections. The wave passed and in a moment all was still as before. This is one of the phenomena of the gulph, and was probably occasioned by a sudden gust of wind, which had passed near us. We had resumed a station, when we were again disturbed by the appearance of a heavy black cloud rising in the horizon;—it drove towards us with great rapidity and before the sails could be taken in, we were visited by a violent gale of wind accompanied by a heavy shower of rain. Thus suddenly are our most tranquil enjoyments changed to turbulence and commotion! Shortly after the squall had passed, the sky became clear & serene for a moment, the moon shone out with peculiar brightness, and displayed a complete and brilliant rainbow in the north. I do not know why the moon should not make rainbows as well as the sun—but I never recollect to have seen one of the kind before. The sailors, ever ready to indulge a superstitious fancy viewed it as the forerunner of misfortune.

Since we have been out, I have seen a number of flying fish every day fluttering about the vessel. To day one of them dropped on deck. It was about 7 or 8 inches long—the shape and appearance of its body resembled that of a chubb—and the wings like those of a bat. The general size of this fish is from 8 to 10 inches long; numbers of them are frequently to be seen flying together, and the sun shining upon their glistening wings gives them a beautiful appearance. The dolphin is the enemy which obliges them thus to flee from their natural element and seek a momentary refuge in the air. I saw several of the latter they are beautiful fish, resembling the trout in shape, and of a bright green colour streaked with lively golden tints.

LORD CHIEF JUSTICE HOLT.

In the reign of Queen Anu, in 1704, several freemen of the borough of Aylesburgh had been refused the liberty of voting at an election for a member of Parliament, though they proved their qualifications as such. The law in this case imposes a fine on the returning officer of 1000l. for every offence. On this principle they applied to Lord Chief Justice Holt, who desired the officer to be arrested. The house of commons, alarmed at this step, passed an order in the house to make it penal for either judge, counsel, or attorney, to assist at the trial; however the Lord Chief Justice, and several lawyers, were hardy enough to oppose this order, and brought it to the court of King's bench. The house highly irritated at this contempt of their order, sent a sergeant at arms for the Judge to appear before them; but that resolute defender of the laws bade him, with a voice of authority, begone; on which they sent a second messsge by their speaker, attended by as many members as espoused the measure. After the speaker, had delivered the mesage, his Lordship replied to him in the following remarkable words: "Go back to your chair, Mr. Speaker, within these five minutes, or you may depend on it I will send you to Newgate: you speak of your authority, but I tell you I sit here as an interpreter of the laws, and a distributor of justice; and were the whole house of commons in your belly, I would not stir one step." The Speaker was prudent enough to refire, and the house were equally prudent to let the affair drop.

SPONGE.

Naturalists have been much embaras sed to determine whether to range sponge in the animal or vegetable family. Some imagined it to be a concretion of sea mud: others have commonly supposed it to be a vegetable production; but it is now allowed to be of animal origin, being the fabric and habitation of some species of worm or polype. The greater part of our sponges are brought from the Mediterranean, especially from Nicari, an island near the coast of Asia, west of Samos. M. Savary, in his "Letters on Greece," mentions Syme or Simo, an island North of Rhodes, as famous for sponges. They grow in abundance round the island; and this fishery, he adds, is the only support of its inhabitants. Men, women and children, all know how to dive, and plunge into the sea in search of the only patrimony bestowed on them by nature: for the island, which is merely a rock of small extent, extremely stony, produces neither grain nor fruit.

PHILADELPHIA Nov. 5, 1817.

A case of considerable interest has occupied the attention of the Circuit Court of the U. States for several days.—A warrant had been issued to arrest a number of military gentlemen, lately arrived at an eastern port from Europe, on a charge of having violated the laws for preserving the neutrality of the United States, in relation to the existing war between Spain and her American Colonies. The arrest having been effected, the court awarded a Habeas Corpus on Wednesday morning returnable the afternoon of the same day for the purpose of inquiring into the cause of their commitment. After the examination of the witnesses on each side and the argument of counsel, the court yesterday afternoon gave their opinion that there was sufficient cause to submit the case to a Grand Jury, and required the defendants to give bail for their appearance to answer in $3000 each. Mr. Ingersoll, the attorney for the district appeared on the side of the prosecution,—Messrs. Chauncey and Meredith for the accused.

CRISPIN and CRISPIANUS.

"Two legendary saints, whose festival, as marked in the Calendar, is on the twenty fifth day of October. According to the legend they were brethren, born at Rome, from whence they travelled into Soissons, in France, about the year 303 to propagate the christian religion, and because they would not be chargeable to others for their mainteinance, they exercised the trade of shoemakers; but the governor of the town discovering them to be christians, ordered them to be beheaded, from which time the shoemakers have made choice of them for their titular saints.

Dobson's Ency. Vol. V. p. 553.

Five reasons for not using spirituous liquors.

A TOUCHSTONE.

1. Because it poisons the blood and destroys the organs of digestion.

2. Because an ENEMY should be kept without the gate.

3. Because I am in health and need no medicine.

4. Because I have my senses and wish to keep them.

5. Because I have a SOUL to be saved or lost.

To the man whose mind is untouched by all or any of the above reasons, a volume on the subject would be useless. He is unfitted for society; and the sooner he is in the grave the better—BETTER for society and for himself—for himself—because his future torment will be less.

Albany Gaz.

A Sailor at the Plough.

A gentleman in New-York wrote to his friend in Connecticut, and enquired of him what was the situation of the political affairs of that state, and what were their prospects; to which he received the following answer.

'Our present prospects remind me of the declaration of a sailor who had hired himself to a farmer, and was set to ploughing with a yoke of oxen and an old mare called Jenny. While the sailor was absent for a draught of water, the team became restless and got into great disorder. He bawled for help. His master ran to him and inquired what was the matter. For God's sake hurry, said Jack, for the larboard ox has got on the starboard side, and old Jin has run foul in the rigging, the plough is on her beam ends, and they are all drifting to the devil stern foremost.'

Norfolk, Oct. 31.—The United States ship FRANKLIN, of 74 guns, anchored in Hampton Roads on Wednesday afternoon, being detained by head winds. The Franklin is bound to Annapolis, where she will receive on board Mr. Rush, our Minister to the court of Great Britain, and after conveying him to London, we understand she will proceed immediately to the Mediterranean to relieve the Washington 74, which ship will then return to the United States. The Franklin will be the first American ship of the line that has ever visited England; and we feel confident that she will encrease the favorable opinion of our character and power which the late war has stamped on the mind of John Bull!

The monument of General MOREAU, stands on the field of battle something more than a mile from Dresden, and though extremely simple, consisting of one granite stone, is very impressive. It is surmounted with a bronze helmet, wreath and sword. The inscription is merely—

"MOREAU der Held fiel hier an der seite ALEXANDERS."

The Hero, MOREAU, fell here by the side of ALEXANDER.

Another Royal Yacht (says a London paper of Sept. 15th) is now building at Portsmouth, to be called the Prince Regent, which is to rival in splendor the celebrated Barge Cleopatra!

Naples, Aug. 12.—Prince Henry of Prussia, visited yesterday the American admiral's ship Washington, of eighty four guns, where he was received and entertained with great ceremony by commodore Chauncey. The American squadron will shortly leave this port and go to Leghorn.

Frog taken out of a rock.—There is now in Mr. Peal's Museum, a frog preserved in spirits which was taken alive out of a compact stone quarry, at the depth of about six feet below the surface of the earth, and it is impossible that the animal could have ever escaped from the cavity in which it was enclosed—it was found by two quarry-men on the farm of Mr. Nathan Sellers, Upper Darby township, five miles from Philadelphia, on the 18th, and continued to live in the Museum until about two o'clock on Tuesday the 21st ultimo.

Centinel.

From the West Jersey Gazette.

THE PRINTER.

"I pity—I pity the printer," said my uncle Toby—"He is a poor devil," rejoined I—"How so," said my uncle Toby.—"In the first place, he must endeavour to please every body and ten to one if he pleases any body: In the negligence of the moment, perhaps a small paragraph pops upon him; he hastily throws it to the compositor—it is inserted—and he is d—d to all intents and purposes!"—"Too much the case," said my uncle, with a sigh, "too much the case." "Nor is that all," continued I, "he sometimes hits upon a piece that pleases him MIGHTILY, and he thinks it cannot but go down with his subscribers; but alas! who can calculate? He inserts it, and all is over with him.——They may forgive others, but they can't forgive the printer.—— He has a host to print for—he has fools, and he has wise men; and every dunce that knows not B from a bull's foot, sets up for a critick.—The pretty miss exclaims, why don't he give us more poetry and bon mots?—Away with these stale pieces. The politician claps his specs on his nose, and runs it over in search of violent invective; he finds none; he takes his specs off—folds them—claps them in his pocket, declaring the paper good for nothing——So it goes. Every one thinks it ought to be printed expressly to please himself, as he is a subscriber, and thus, weekly, it is brought to the grand ordeal."

Trim could no longer contain himself, but rising and making a stride to the middle of the floor, with his arms akimbo, & his head upright, exclaimed with a loud and audible voice, "If I was a printer, an't please your honour, I'd please myself. I'd never give up the ground to any one, or renounce one sentiment. I would not be swayed by the whim, caprice, folly of every one, but would mark out a straight line, and pursue it." (Here Trim traced with the point of his stick a right line from my stool.) "If I could not succeed in a plain, independ course, I'd freely kick the beam."

THE President and Directors have this day clared a dividend of 4 per cent for the last months.—The same will be paid to the stockh ders or their legal representatives on or after 3th inst.

ALEXR. JOHNSTON, Cas

PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1817.

Some one told us that he considered the remarks we made in a late paper about northern artisans and the furniture for the President's house, as indicating a disposition unfavourable to American manufactures. Nothing can be further from the fact; and we protest against this patent method of making every idea that a man expresses pro or con on any matter, the index of his general habitudes of thinking. It is the great tide of national commerce that injures our manufactures—the occasional importation of fine specimens of art must have a directly contrary tendency.

Suppose our government were to employ a practical man of common sense, to assist in cultivating the arts amongst any portion of our Indian neighbours; would not such a one, instead of confining their taste, ingenuity and emulation to the rude specimens of their own production, introduce among them all those things that he wished them to imitate. He would not, to be sure, display to their blank, disinterested admiration, any of our cuckoo clocks, ruffle trimming machines, double-patent-lever-cork screws or perpetual motions—he would not set them at establishing a reputation for unrivalled cunningness of handiwork—devising the best methods of swindling folks out of their money by wonders worth nothing; but he would propose a system of progressive improvement; rising from the conveniences to the luxuries of life; beginning with simplicity, and gradually introducing elegance. At first, he would have their ignorant and barbarous scruples to encounter; but after they might attain mediocrity, he would find a greater barrier opposed to the progress of their civilization in that overweening vanity of skill which we now behold so common and so popular amongst us.

And now does any body suppose that the legislature of North Carolina, for instance, would have done more for the encouragement and improvement of the fine arts in that state, if, instead of sending ten thousand dollars to Europe for a piece of statuary, they had given that sum to the most ingenious man amongst themselves for the best effort of his skill?

But, as regards the national buildings at Washington, we are glad to learn by the late news we noticed, that at least some of the money appropriated to them may not be extravagantly expended. Much better buildings could have been erected for less than one half of the money they cost, not counting the repairs rendered necessary by the visit of the British marauders. In the designs they display neither taste nor common sense; and have been praised only by people as stupid as the architects of them, but laughed at by every scientific man that we have heard speaking about them.

The President's house forcibly reminds one of that gloomy pile, the Pennsylvania Penitentiary; and the Capitol looks like what one might suppose to be a Grecian monastery, if such a fabric had ever existed. A stranger placed at once within the Bastile-fashioned cells of the latter—those little dens made for the accommodation of committees and cake-women; or in any of the long dark passages, with arches supported by plaistered buttresses, half Grecian & half Gothic—might think himself in sepulchral vaults; or in the caves of the "forty thieves;" and if haply he had ever visited the American theatres, he might think how inferior were the attempts of our scene painters in their representation of dungeon chambers.

After the examples of wasteful, tasteless expenditure, and shameless extortion witnessed there, we have little sympathy with the mortified Americanism of the artists aforesaid, and would rather have seen the President's house, furniture and all carried from Europe; or from Cape Cod, which the sailors say is out of the world, as have seen in the result of that profusion, only a clumsy, anomalous piles, utterly disreputable to the country.

"Exegi monumentum ære perennius," which may be translated thus,

We have built a monument that will last longer than the money would have done.

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

The Paris papers are principally occupied by new articles—the returns of a popular election. The polls appear to be well attended; and the electioneering almost as violent as that in England or Pennsylvania. From there being 58 candidates we should imagine the French yet ignorant of the science of caucusing."

The Emperor of Russia was on a tour of part of his empire. He left Petersburg the 5th August. He will be attended by several regiments as a guard of honor. One of his objects is to examine the primary institutions for the instruction of his subjects, & to endow schools and seminaries. The Grand Duke Michael, brother of the Emperor has also commenced a journey into the interior provinces.

The successes of the British arms against the native princes in India continued uninterrupted.

Marshal Gouvion St. Cyr, is Minister of War, and Count Mole, Minister of Marine, to Louis 18th. They were both in high employment under Buonaparte; & have succeeded two others who also were employed by him. They are men of talents, and in their appointment Louis shews that he is governed by principle. If his crown rested on an unstable basis, he would be more partial in his nominations.

Cure of Hydrophobia.—The plant called Alisma Plantago, is announced, officially, by a society in Russia, to be a cure for the bite of a mad dog, even in those in whom the hydrophobia has actually taken place.

There is no doubt, the Emperor of Russia has invited the powers of Europe to unite for the suppression of all pirates and sea robbers; in which the cruizers of the unacknowledged Congress of South-America will be included.

The Prince Regent has been on an aquatic trip off not on the coast of France. His oath of office forbids the latter; and in this particular denies him a right exercised by his lowest subjects.

Almost every Monarch of Europe, in "these piping times of peace," is making a tour, a la mode de President d'Etats Unis.

IMPORTANT IF TRUE.

Captain Boden, of the brig Hope, who arrived at Boston, on the first instant, in 35 days from St. Sebatians, informs, that when he sailed a report was in circulation that war had been declared between the Spaniards and Potuguese, in consequence of some possessions which each nation claimed in South America. The report reached St. Sebastians by the mail from Madrid, and was generally believed to be true.

Sickness at New-Orleans.—The New-Orleans paper of the 4th ult. cautions the inhabitants of that city, then absent, not to be induced to return by the cool state of the weather. "The disease, adds the Editor, still continues. Strangers arriving are as liable to take it, as they were in the month of August; and, as the season advances, the cases become more virulent." The absent citizens are therefore advised not to return, until after a severe November frost.

It will be remembered, that complaint was sometime ago made that American citizens were inhumanly suffered by the British to be detained prisoners by the Indians: this produced an application from our government to the British Minister who immediately made the necessary inquiry; and Sir John Sherbroke, in reply to Mr Bagot, assures him, that not one American citizen is in confinement among the Indian tribes in Lower Canada.

Theatrical.—Last evening the opera of Love in a Village, was brought forward for the purpose of introducing to an American audience the celebrated singer, long the favorite of the English stage, Mr. Incledon. Notice of this intention was only hinted in the Saturday morning's papers, but so loudly had fame proclaimed his great merits, that the house was crowded to an overflow, long before the regular time of drawing up the curtain. Such a house has not been seen since the time when Cooke made his first appearance. He was greeted, on his entrance, with warm and long continued plaudits. As soon as he was permitted to proceed in his song, he discovered a mellow, full-toned voice, of great compass, under the guidance of much taste and science. But it was soon evident, that the extreme fulness of the house was unfavorable to his fine modulations; and the more sweet and delicate touches, in which if we do not misjudge, he is particularly successful, were almost lost to the audience. He gave, in a fine style of tender simplicity, the charming song of Handel, beginning—

"My Dolly was the fairest thing!
"Her breath discloses the sweets of spring."

The concluding lines—

"I found her heart was winter cold,"

was executed with a pathos that in reality made the sound an echo to the sense. But his greatest and his most successful effort was in Stevens' much celebrated song of The Storm. Mr. Incledon immediately by his manner and the tones of his powerful voice, made the most forcible impression on every part of the house. But, with great deference to better judges, who have long ago pronouced Mr. Incledon's performance of this song unrivailed, if we might venture upon an observation somewhat at variance with this opinion, we would beg permission to "hesitate dislike" to the trill and falsetto which he introduced into a song meant to be descriptive of the utmost distress and despair. When we are listening to such sounds, as might naturally be expected from a being in this deplorable condition, we experience a kind of shock at being forcibly called off to witness an ill-timed exhibition of science and voice by the musician. I only mean to say, if those great critics that preside in an English theatre, from whose decisions there is no appeal, had not given this incongruity their sanction, we should hazard the opinion that it was a violent deviation from both nature and a just taste. This evening we shall have the pleasure to witness Mr. Incledon's powers in The Waterman.—N. Y. E. Post.

The African corsairs are again beginning to spread alarm throughout the Mediterranean by their depredations. The following is an article from Rome on the subject, of the 27th September:—

"We have received advice from Flumicino, of the 2d ult. which states, that a Barbary pirate chased an Italian vessel, & had at length come up with her. The Italian, after fighting for an hour, was compelled to strike her colours. She made signals to vessels to seek shelter in the different ports to avoid these marauders

JOHN M'CLEAN.

Pittsburgh, June 10, 1817.

PHILIPSBURG.

The Subscriber having agreed with JAMES ROSS, Esq. of Pittsburgh, for the purchase of his real property, on the west bank of the Ohio River, opposite WELLSBURG, will offer for SALE, on the Second Monday in November next, the

Lots in said Town,

By him laid out upon the Premises.

The Terms of Sale will be as follows, viz.

PAYMENT to be made in three equal annual instalments from the time of Sale, without interest, with an allowance of a discount of eight per cent for prompt payment—bond with good personal security to be given by the purchaser, payable to the proprietor's agent, Thomas Johnston, in the Old Bank of Steubenville, or in some convenient Bank on the western waters, which may be hereafter named for that purpose.

Upon receiving payment for any Lot or Lots sold, Mr. Ross will execute conveyances for the same of a good and indisputable estate—for this purpose the conveyances will be deposited in the Bank, to be taken away by the purchaser upon making his payments.

The right of having or keeping a FERRY, will be reserved to the proprietor.

It is believed that no property of the kind ha-been offered for sale upon the western waters possessing more natural or accidental advantages. It is situated on the bank of Ohio, opposite Wellsburgh, in the centre of perhaps the richest and best improved body of lands within several hundred miles of it; in a healthy climate, and in the vicinity of towns that have flourished, and are now flourishing, but in which unimproved property is holden at so high a price, as to prevent the lower, and most useful classes of society from holding.

WELLSBURGH has long been the largest exporting town within a great distance, of articles the growth of the country. The settlement is filled with Mills and Mill-seats, abounds with Coal and excellent Water. The Town offered for sale can be supplied in the dryest season, with spring water of the first quality, sufficient for the population of a large city.

A public road is now laying out from the city of Pittsburgh direct to this place, which it is believed will furnish the shortest route from that city to Smithfield, through Cadiz and Cambridge to Zanesville, and also through Mountpleasant Zanesville.

An act of incorporation has passed the Assembly of Virginia, for Turnpiking both that road, and another to Washington, to go into effect when the Assembly of Pennsylvania shall pass similar laws. No doubt is entertained that the road from Washington will be provided for at the next session, and the work commenced in the ensuing year. These roads will make Wellsburgh and the New Town the principal thoroughfare of travelling from east to west, and from west to east, connected as they will be with the eastern and northern states through Pittsburgh, and with the middle states by the great Cumberland road at Washington.

Persons desiring to purchase property in the proposed Town, would do well to remember the success of those who, at the time of their respective establishments, purchased town property in Steubenville, Smithfield, Cadiz, &c. Such has been the rise in value of the property. It cannot be doubted that the same success will attend those who may purchase in the town now proposed for sale.

The articles of agreement between the subscriber and Mr. Ross, will be shewn on the day of sale and the particular terms of public sale be more clearly stated by the Agent.

P. Doddridge.

Williamson & T. Mayfield's Patent Self-acting Shutter Fasteners.

A constant supply wholesale and retail, may be had on application to the Agents,

HUGHES & TOMKINS,

At their HARDWARE STORE No. 150, Market street Baltimore.

THE Patentees recommend (with a confidence strengthened by the approbation of many respectable Architects and others) this new, neat and useful Fastener; and feel no hesitation in authorising their agents to assure all such purchasers (if any) as shall not find the article to answer the just expectations on applying it to use, that money will be promptly returned on a similar turn of the Fasteners.

It has decidedly an advantage over the former method of window fastening: being incomparably more elegant, affording greater security to the window when closed, and by its certainty of acting, securing back the shutter when put open or blown back by the wind, and is cheaper and better than the old method

 To those of the trade who purchase again, the usual liberal discount will be allowed. The establishment is in its infancy, and wanted capital—therefore all orders must be accompanied with the cash.
